

From: finnabennacht@yahoo.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/11/01 7:02pm
Subject: antitrust

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am a computer user and I strongly object to the settlement you have brokered with Microsoft. In the United States we are supposed to have choices. When it comes to operating systems for personal computers we have two: Windows and Linnux. Windows is an expensive, difficult system that uses excessive space on the hard drive, is plagued by inconvenient system failures, and has little or no capacity for modification. Linnux is a cheap, unfathomable system that supports few applications. Our choices are very limited because of Microsoft's monopoly. The whole point of this court case was to give citizens more choices when we shop for pc operating systems. The remedy Microsoft has been able to foist on you and us protects their monopoly and leaves a consumer landscape in the operating system market that allows two choices: bad and worse. I want to be able to buy an operating system that has only the functions I need, can be taylorred to my specifications, augmented seamlessly with many different types of software, has a resonable price, is reliable, never forces me to use a particular internet browser for smooth operation... get the picture?

Mike Brennan
110 Beresini Lane
Hollister, CA 95023

Do You Yahoo!?
Find a job, post your resume.
<http://careers.yahoo.com>